² Please include a current (not older than 6 months) specialist medical certificate from the attending specialist or (registered/authorized panel) psychotherapist that confirms your information in medical terms (but can, however, be understood by a medical layperson) and approves or recommends the requested measure(s), possibly with a recommendation for the scope of the accessibility accommodation (e.g. 20% extension of the writing time provided, 5/10/15-minute break after each ... minutes of the examination, etc.). Diagnostic tests (e.g. for reading and writing difficulties) should not be more than 5 years old.

The diagnosis, including the ICD10 code, is subject to data protection and does not have to be included in the application or specialist medical certificate.
