Description:
Indigenous religions are both easy and hard to define. In one sense, they are easy to recognize in the long history of Western representations—for example, in art, comics, and film—that have created particular associations in the popular imagination, such as shamanic rituals, smoking peace pipes, and communicating with the spirit world. When one digs beneath the surface, however, Indigenous religions are hard to define for at least two reasons. First, they have largely been represented on outsiders' terms throughout the long history of settler-colonialism and forced Christianization. In this sense, “Indigenous religions” is a relational concept that must be considered in connect to Christian cultures, including the particular forms of state secularism that are practiced in Canada and the United States. Second, as Suzanne Owen points out, many Indigenous communities reject the term “religion,” preferring terms like “spirituality” in order to distance themselves from organized forms of Christianity. What is more, many Indigenous communities view the relationship between culture, “spirituality,” and politics differently than is commonly understood in Euro-Western societies, and thus need to be considered on their own terms. This includes Indigenous forms of knowledge, which tend to stress the relationship between humans, animals, and the land over human-centred notions of progress and development. In this class, we will begin by looking at how Indigeneity has been defined by settler-colonial societies and how this has impacted the ways in which Indigenous communities have defined themselves. We will also explore “new age” appropriations of Native America spirituality, Native American forms of Christianity, as well as the growing resurgence in Indigenous forms of knowledge and practice that increasingly challenge Western notions of religion, science, and progress.

Advising and Service

The University of Bonn offers a wide range of advising opportunities and services for you to use at all stages of university studies. Our advising and service network is here to help you with everything related to academic orientation, application and enrollment, degree progression, academic problems, personal challenges, stays abroad, and career counseling. These services are supplemented by various student-related advisory bodies and the services of Studentenwerk Bonn in the areas of funding, housing, and social affairs.

Subject-Specific Study Advisory Services

The subject-specific study advisory services provide help with detailed questions concerning program contents and progression, modules, and examination regulations, and the opportunities for selecting academic priorities during your studies. There are also the persons to contact if you want to discuss the possibilities of earning transfer credit for previous coursework and examinations before submitting your application.

Central Study Advisory and Counseling Service

The Central Study Advisory and Counseling Service (ZStB) guides prospective students through the process of gaining information and making decisions, offers advice on choosing a degree program and applying for admission, and helps new students get started at the University. For current students, it serves as a general resource providing guidance and support in periods of academic re-orientation and when students experience doubts about their studies or personal problems.

Student Registry

The Student Registry is responsible for handling applications, admissions, and enrollments. It manages issues of absence, deregistrations, grade changes, and semester fee payments as well as many other issues in student management.

International Office

The University of Bonn's International Office is the contact point for all issues relating to national and international programs and activities. How and when do I plan to stay abroad? What are potential destinations? How do I pay for everything and how do I prepare myself in the best possible way? Comprehensive counseling services are also available for international students to help them structure their studies in Bonn in the best possible way.

Advice and support from fellow students

Advice and support from fellow students

Student councils

The student councils provide information and support from the students' perspective. Student councils are a key point of contact, especially for first-year students, because their activities at the start of studies offer good opportunities to forge initial contacts and familiarize yourself with the University environment. Many student councils offer study workshops, help arrange language exchanges and learning partnerships, and organize subject-related excursions.

General Students' Committee (ASTA)

Alongside representing students' political interests, the General Students' Committee is also a counseling and service organization. Their expertise covers a wide range of topics, such as federal financial aid (BAföG), advice for students with children, social and legal consultations, advice for international students, and advice for queer students. It is the place to go to for help and advice on just about any issue.

Psychological Counseling

In personal meetings, you can obtain counseling – including preventive advice – regarding psychological concerns, insecurities or problems that can have a negative impact on your quality of life or academic success. Our counselors will help you develop new perspectives, your own constructive solutions and strategies to tackle challenges. If needed, we can also advise you on finding therapy and/or put you in touch with someone who will be able to help. In addition, you can take advantage of our group sessions, which focus on specific issues and target groups.
