

“Living and working in Germany – Intercultural Training for international doctoral students and researchers”

Copyright: M. Böschmeyer

Simply doing a research stay abroad does not guarantee acquiring intercultural competency. It is necessary to actively reflect on the experiences had for a process of personal development and learning to take place.

Contents are:

- culture standards
- scope with a culture shock
- dealing with critical interaction and everyday situations, especially at the workplace at the institute

The aim of the workshop is to prepare for moments of culture shocks and to develop strategies for dealing with them.
